Objective

This guide will help you to check iCloud logins on an iMac. We have marked steps that an abuser could find out about with the following warning:

Be careful!
This action could be visible to the abuser

Steps

First, open System Preferences:

A new window will appear. Click on Apple ID at the top right corner:
A new window will appear. You will see something like this:

At the bottom left corner, you will see the devices associated with your iCloud account:
If you click on one of the devices, you will see more information about it:
If you do not recognize a device, you can remove it.

Be careful! The person of concern might be logged out right away. Some abusers may become more violent if they get locked out of your account. If this is a concern for you, we strongly recommend that you carry out safety planning with a domestic violence or other support professional before making any changes to your account.

In order to remove a device, click on the Remove from account button at the bottom:

© Cornell Tech 2020. This guide is for nonprofit educational and research purposes only and is not intended for commercial use. Apple screens, notifications, and text are included selectively pursuant to the “fair use” provisions of United States copyright law, 17 U.S.C. § 107.